Preface

It is a pleasure to present our readers with another volume in the series entitled Voices of Russian Transpersonalism. In 1993, the editors of the Australian Journal of Transpersonal Psychology undertook to expand the disciplinary and geographical perimeters of the journal by renaming it the International Journal of Transpersonal Studies. We are grateful to the current editor in chief of IJTS, Professor Erin M. Neill of Queensland University of Technology, for especially supporting contributions from Russia, where, prior to the demise of the Soviet regime, all too many voices were silenced in one way or another.

1The first volume in the series was published as a supplement to the International Journal of Transpersonal Studies, 1995, Volume 14. For help in preparing the present issue, we are indebted to Annie Van Assche for her conscientious word processing and copyediting, to Darryl M. Chan for computer assistance, and to Philippe L. Gross for e-mail communications and copyediting. Most of the contributions are reprinted from a forthcoming book entitled Everything is According to the Way: Voices of Russian Transpersonalism, edited by T. R. Soidla and S. I. Shapiro (Brisbane, Australia: Bolda-Lok Publishing).
