TRAVELING IN CIRCLES OF LIFE

ADRIENNE V. MORRISON
SECONDARY SCIENCE TEACHER/URBAN POET
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

CELL SPEAK

I, from the Beginning,
    am a part of forever.
        to the more complex,
            to you, Human, late arrival.

I begin new life,
    trap and send messages, stretch, pulsate, contract, divide.

I give you visions, aromas, warm sensations, raucous/gentle noises
        all the shades of feelings your brain interprets.

I, build, demolish, rebuild using the bihelical director's blueprints, ancestrally passed repository of all that is you.

Microscopic clones protect you, conquer aliens
        though a few may escape our vigilance.

Busyness is the hallmark of my gelatinous mass.
    Production, local distribution, shipping exports stopping only at death.

When your span is completed, I donate my atoms to other life, continue the Cycle, unbroken, energized by the power of infinity.

I, a part of the Beginning, will always be a part of Forever.
PROMISED LAND

HE,

Addict,
  crumpled, compromised, shuffling, nodding, waiting captive of the white powder, Junkie.

Homeless,
  manchild, regressed, unloving, despairing, fearing bone wrenching, withdrawal pain, Prisoner.

Dropout,
  unlovable,
  discard, egoless, manchild, living Zombie.

SHE,

Like a crumpled chocolate wrapper, she discarded self, Nightmares push her to the dealer's heaven.

Lost soul,
  children forgotten,
  bonds only with johns, pimps, white promise of peace, pseudowoman.

Repelled
  passerbys think her void her fault. If only she lived by their morality, cleaned up her act.

Virgin
  visions taint their thoughts, Taint her thoughts in lucid moments, Coke, horse erase her fall from grace, her sins.

THEY

Couple,
  children of the night dropouts, from living, failed by those who knew them and each other.
THE CONGREGATION

Columbian, Asian crack, power defining, escapes past border sentinels pretending unawareness of its exit, in human mules, or false partitions, along a thousand routes planned with inventiveness rivaling a sci-fi blockbuster. Rural landing strips, obscure and murky coves lined with flickering, beckoning light to guide the chariots to their havens where kilos of lethal, druglord fortune building, user unfriendly illusions are welcome.

This cash crop is never counted in the GNP (Gross Nat'l Product) or on the bank cartels' bottom lines.

Refined, added to recipes of look-alikes each time it descends the ladder to the swelling ranks.

Methodically separated by sharp razors, while columns stand at attention waiting to serve the believers.

eagerly seeking temporary release from mundane reality, life's pain and overwhelming tensions.

In corner outdoor markets, patrons palm dollars to life hardened children

dreaming of riches and their few minutes in the Sun while drivers, cruising in junkers to Beamers, thrust furtive hands through half-closed windows towards brazen merchants. Prizes clutched tightly, they speed away unmindful of playing children or old folks crossing.

only of their second fear, impoundment.
Their first is soothed.

The clientele
are of common philosophy religion, and obsession-- to attend the Church of "Make Me Feel Good"

But its frequent services demand their presence throughout the day, every day or the promised guarantees are voided, with no money back

And its collection plate is a yawning abyss leading to the bottomless pit of Never Enough
Give Me More.

MELANIN MUSINGS
"If you're white, all right. If you're black, get back."
Jump rope melody, childhood, sing-a-long.
All about skin, melanin defined. Black organ, protector, encompassing, strong Skin, bathed in utero untouched by light.
Skin, scraped in playing, patched, under repair.
Skin, acned curse of adolescents, dreaded sight.
Skin, roused by love's pounding, caressings, care Skin, aged armor, chinks easily, thinning.
Skin, returned to elements, life reborn.
Cycle's completed. Death is not winning.
Skin-black, brown, yellow, red, white; no scorn from the Creator, no color more bless'd.
Homo sapiens, skin's skin - no more, no less.
TRANSCENDENT MEDITATION

I repeat the mantra verbally, then seal my lips, and hear it inside my head. Tension leaves my muscles to twitch into relaxation. My mind detaches.

Neurons empty, disconnected problems tranquilized, flees my consciousness.

Blood, usually unheard, rages through my ears,
sounding lub-a-dub, lub-a-dub, pulsed by the heart, a comfort, evoking repressed memories of pre-birth life...and mother.

Tempted by a sense of joyful nothingness, benign darkness, I float, willingly, towards a pinpoint light that widens, engulfs me with its soft, seducing, calming cocoon.

Peacefully inside, I release my will to it,
I embrace it joyfully.

I long to stay in conscious death, invite the afterlife, and be.

But, slowly, with quickening breath, alerted muscles, I relinquish heaven to life.
PANDORA’S BOX REOPENED

When I give breath to memories long dead, disappointments, shamed anger, defeats, wed to a hideous monster constructed of words, twisted feelings, muted cries, forgiveness unheard,

I free to be surfaced the chaos in me, self-doubts and fear of the dark side I see of furtive id lurking round in my mind, unwanted phantom, playing games that unbind unreachable goals still causing unrest, the fear of failing the best of Life’s tests, rejections through hurts never meant to be done, the wounds I inflicted, more than just one.

Loosed memories, go! Rise up to the light.
Unshroud my day. Uncrucify my night.

ENDING

When I
see death’s profile emerge while mine
fades the mirror of Life.

I will vacate my fragile shell release my spirit to fuse, joyfully, with the Greater I.
